The Court of Appeals has reconvened after its summer vacation.

Finee George, of Servia, has been wounded for the second time in battle.

We don't know about the dumdum buliets, but the war is being reported by dumb-dumb correspondents.

Apparently about 3700 colored votes were cast Monday and a good guess would be that 3400 of them were wet.

The equinoetial rains arrived on time. It began raining early Tuesday evening and it was at it twenty- days. four hours later.

The three British cruisers sunk carried crews of 775 men each, and is is estimated that only 700 were picked up by the crafts near them

It is well that the county unit law does not work both ways, or a good deal of dry territory would have been made wet by last Monday's elections in three counties.

Sarajevo, the capital of Bosnia, which was abandoned by the Austrians after a heavy defeat, has been occupied by the Servians and Montenegrins. This is the town where Archduke Ferdinand and his wife were assassinated June 28, which caused the war.

The first report of the British operations in France issued since the Germans have been on the retreat has been given out by the War Office. It shows that the two armies fought for days with only the river Alsne day morning on a 600-mile endurance, died in a hospital in Louisville Tuesbetween them, and the heaviest part of the work fell upon the artillery divisions.

Moving Pictures Continue More in Demand Than Ever.

Some Interesting Figures Forwarded by American Consuls in Europe-Tastes of Peoples Are Shown to Vary Widely.

American consuls in European and other foreign countries have recently been sending reports to Washington on the motion picture industry, these reports showing that east and west, north and south, the "movles" now hold sway and are playing a star role in the amusements of the nations.

From many places comes the consular declaration that the attractions at the film plny theaters are not merely one of the chief amusements, but the chief amusement. From Nuremberg, Germany, for Instance, Consul George Nicolas Ifft writes that the moving picture "lias advanced to first place among the people of Bavaria." In Munich there are 32 theaters, with a total seating enpacity of 4,650, and a yearly sale of 3,000,000 tickets, while in Nuremberg there are 14 theaters, with a senting enpacity of 3,400. The other large Bavarian cities all have numerous theaters.

In regard to comparison with other amusements. Consul George N. 1fft writes that in the elty of Hof the total attendance at places of public amusement for one year was 209,551. Of film shows. Attendances at other aniusements were: Theaters, 38,000; concerts, 8,500; public dances, 4,000 circuses, 7,000. In the city of Fuerth lu one month the attendance nt the 'movies" was 14,000, while for that month and the two preceding months the attendance at all other public places of amusement, including ordipary theaters, was but 12,600.

From Great Britalu come reports that, while the motion-picture theaters are constantly liereasing their hold on the public, American Illms of cowboy life-well received not long ago-are beginning to lose popularity.

But His Fiancee's Valedictory on Microbes and Kissing Was a Stumbling Block.

By FRANK H. MELOON,

Somsylght, 1914, by Dally Story Pub. Co.) thad Hortense Heaton made up her calling an engagement to attend a maind to definite action; and 20 times, and course, she had allowed her shoughts to vaciliate backward to the had barely time to make her preparalions. Everything cise was imme so supremely ridiculous," she said to dintely laid hy, and n haif hour later herseif softly. "And the complaint secons so absurd and so difficult to ing the rise of the curtain. thurn into words. I can't tell Robert that he doesn't love me enough. His adoration is too evident in his eyes far me to doubt it, but I'm not a marble image, and I don't want to be adored as if I were nn angel. I know I'm not. I know I'm just ordinary Mesh and blood, but Robert doesn't to think so. I've tried every way I can think of to convince him, bet it's no use.'

Miss Hortense flung herself face downward on the most tempting piece and furniture in the room, burying her carries nose in the very middle of a pillow stuffed with fir balsam. She did not attempt to keep back the tears which forced themselves to her ador able blue eyes or to choke down the sobs which convuised a throat as dainty and fair as any model's.

"What would Robert say if he could see me now?" she thought, a smile like zanshine in the midst of summer ; rais lashing across her face. because we're both coffege bred, he thinks he must act differently than other people. And he was so ready to believe my jest about the danger of microbes in kissing, that i've uever been kissed once since we became engaged. He says hugging's a demunstration of rudimentary affection, and laughs at boiding hands as nomething peculiar to the lower classes. Well, I'd just like to have a "little rudimentary effection, and if somehody doesn't hold my hand pretty soon, why, I'm just going stumming!"

Having finished her cry, Miss Hortense felt decidedly better. She sat up and began to fling soft pillows anto new positions with athletic vigor. The idea!" sho exclaimed, sharply, "I don't see what makes Robert so stiff and prim. lie's a good deal The an old maid since he got those horrid degrees of A. M. and Ph. D. What good will they do him, anyway? He's got the money to have a good time without them; and if he hadn't it now he could share mine as soon as we're married. I guess dad will give me enough for both. As it is, I can trathfully say I'd rather have been born without a silver spoon in my mouth, if ail the silver spoon is go ing to bring me is a man gone daft ... against kissing and hugging, and holding hands. Being engaged to a man like that is what our Mamie would call 'the raw fimit!'

'Her brain formed a mental picture of Robert Rouin, A. M., 1th. D., tall and athletic figure, clad in perfect Atting evening clothes, just as she had last seen him. Severity sat Centaurlike upon his Gibson-modeled face, but 't was the severity of thought.

"Why," continued the girl indignantly "can't be cast it off for a few immutes when he is with me? He loves me; I don't doubt that. But it is like the terribie admiration of Zeus. It is as if a god were making love to a mortal, half fearing to sully himsalf by touching the inferior being. I'm suro Robert hasn't that teeling. but that's exactiv what it's like."

Miss Hortense recalled the fact that her unsatisfactory flance had wom his varsity letter on the foottowit eleven. She also summoned to mind several stories of his athletic ability which had not a little influenced her decision when she had to . make up her mind whether to say yes our no to the great question which stomes at lenst once to every girl. Since his classmates had separated and scattered to the four cormers of the earth, Robert Rouin, A. M., Ph. D., had been continually, though unconsciously, demonstrating the difference which existed between 'nimself and Robert Rouin, right tackie of the varsity eleven. It was, perhaps, accounted for by the fact that his mind had turned to newer and aver channels; that he was confronted by obstacles of infinitely greater difficulty and moment; and that being always set and obstinate and perseveringly stuhborn in his way, be was bound to surmount them.

"Now, what shuff I write?" Miss Hortense asked herself, dipping a pearl-handled pen into the cut-glass ink well at ber right hand. She poised the pen above the paper for a moment undecidedly. Then she laid it down carelessly, not noting that she dropped it into n box of Emonogramed writing paper, over write an luk blot spread itself alarmingly.

'It has come to the point," asserted the young lady, as if seeking to convince herself that her notion was perfectly just. "It has come to the point when I must break off this engagement; and it's so ridiculous, too. when I love Robert, and he loves me But the gist of the situation is that we aren't fitted for each other. We're vice opposite, it would drive me wild rto have to live with Rob rt the rest o my life and be admired from a distance. I want to do part of the ad pairing myself, and I am obvious! Di fer doing it : Reb.its w.

I suppose it will make the poor boy dreadfully unhappy, but I've heard get over affairs of the beart very easily. I wouldn't do it, if I thought Robert would feel very, very much cut up over it, but it somehow seems to me as if he is the sort to find plenty of solace in his phliological researches. Anyway, he's perfectly set on a trip into the South seas, so that he can study the Poly-nesian tonguo at first hund." As Miss Hortense reached this stage in her sollioquy, she glanced at a Twenty times in the past two days little jeweled timepiece, suddenly reproduction of nmateur theatricals by the aimmni of Robert's university. She found her at Conservatory half awalt-

"Did you know your flance is take the leading part?" asked Miss Ridge, her boon companion.

"Why, no," admitted Miss Hortense, he never said anything to me about

"Weil," rejoined the ether, "it was not known until the last minute that it would be necessary. Mr. Rouin had taken the part once before, and his old friends wouldn't listen to his saying no." The select nudlence that afternoon was accustomed to witnessing the performances of the world's leading stars, but it was unnnimqusty conceded that the part of the passionnte lover had never been so perfectly depicted as it was by Robert Rouin. It was so natural that, in the language of the press agent, the nudience forgot to applaud.

"I congratulate you, Hortense, on having a lover like that!" exclaimed Miss Hidge, 'roguishly, yet more than half in earnest.

The face of liertense flushed crimson, but inward agony was ber portion. "Oh, If It were true, If it were true!" she exclaimed, ngain and again, but always with the realization of how very far it was from being true. It is, however, very seldom that a sensible American girl fails to accomplish what she desires to achieve; and this is especially true in iove affairs. In a flash of pure inspiration a pian outlined itself vividiy before the girl's eyes. She laughed nloud. That night it was carried into execution.

When Robert Rouin, A. M., Ph. D called at 7:30 o'clock that evening, he seated himself in the usual chair, and, faultlessly altired, without so much as an eyelash awry, began his customary long distance admiration of his flancee, Miss Hortense, with a look of determination to do or to die in her eyes, after a few minutes' conversation, rose from her chair, waiked over to her lover, and plumped herself into his lap with a solid drop of 135 pounds that fairly made the floor creak and the chair threaten to give way nt every rung.

At the same time she threw both her shapely nrms around his neck, and, careless of germs, planted a resounding smack on his lips, which, as soon as he recovered from his first astonishment, he made haste to return with interest.

"And you aren't piny acting now. Robert?" she asked, anxiously, after

"Not a bit, little girl," he replied, heartily. "You see, I thought you were really opposed to kissing and holding hands and lovers' embraces. You said so, I remember, in your valedictory." "I said a lot of things in that I didn't mean," was the giri's reply. 'And, Robert, I can't tell you what I started to write you this after-

But after awhile she did. She had no fault to find in that quarter since she expinined why she had mentally referred to him as her unsatisfactory

Young Man's Wager Manifestly Un fair, Owing to the Conditions That Were Imposed.

There was no sound except the frint and regular tick of a watch. Otherwise silence and gloom pervaded the elegantly furnished drawing

In one chair sat a beautiful girl her lips tightly closed, her eyes staring straight before her, and her evcry muscle tense with a powerful effort of self-control. In another sat a young man whose face expressed seriousness but confidence. In his hand, he held an open watch which he observed closely, only raising his eves now and then to glance at the beautiful girl, who seemed to be in such agony.

Five seconds, ten, fifteen, twenty seconds passed. The position of neither the young man nor beautiful girl had changed. Suddenly her eyes gleamed with a wild light, her bosom heaved, she clasped her hands convulsively, and-"I must speak!" burst from her loodless lips.

In 1871 the family moved to Hopkinsville and John J's. earliest recollections are associated with Hopkinsville, although he is not to the manor born. His first four years in the city were spent on South Main street and at the end of that time he had developed into a schoolboy of seven and was already on the lookout for a business opening. He made his first money by selling newswhen he was ten years old. The rattle of the coins in his pocket fired him with an ambition to be a succu:s'ul busiuess man some day and he started a line of activity that is still bringing results. He stopped work long enough to attend the public schools and finish his education at South Kentucky College, and in 1886, a lusty youth of 18, he plunged into the foundry business with his older brother, Chas. W. Metcalfe, now of Princeton, Ky. Four years later John J embarked in business for himself at his present stand and for 24 years every succeeding year has been better than the one before. From a small beginning, on borrow ed capital, he has by close application, indomitable energy and wileawake methods, developed his business to large proportions. In 1910 he tore down the house in which he started and replaced it with his preent handsome brick building, designed especially for his business, which has since 1907 been limited to null supplies, business taking the name of John J. OLD SHOE FOILS PICKPOCKET

Philadelphia Girl, Wedding Guest, With "Good Luck Emblem," Balks Thief.

Only the quick eye and ready arm f Miss Catharine Lee, a young and charming wedding guest, saved William Zeidler, just married, from having his pocket pieked as he led his bride from her home, 1706 North which was to whisk the pair away on their honeymoon.

Miss Lee, with other guests, stood outside the door after the wedding, forming a gantlet through which the bridal couple passed in a shower of rice. She had a shoe in her hand, which she intended to throw for good luck. As she was bracing herself for the throw she saw a stranger deftly slip his hand into the bridegroom's ip pocket. She brought the shoe down upon the stranger's face with a shout of "Thief!" which caused the ould-be pickpocket to flee, with orty or more guests in pursuit.

After a chase of several blocks the nan was eaught. — Philadelphia North American.

AS EVIL ABSINTHE SEEN

Plous Old Moor Even Goes So Far as to Describe it as an invention of Satan.

"Absinthe is an invention of the evil one," earnestly reclared an old Moor to whom a trader tried to explain the tyrannous nature of General Lyautey's order forbidding the sale of absinthe in Morocco.

"On its roots he pours the blood of a peacock; then, when the leaves begin to grow, he sprinkles them with the blood of a monkey; then he dips the stalks in the blood of a bear; lastly he mingles with the juice of the plant the blood of a pig.

"So that when the faithful drinks absinthe, at the first glass his appetite awakes, and he arises, proud as a peacock; at the second glass he becomes excited and gesticulates like a monkey; at the third he becomes quarrelsome and spiteful, like a bear; at the fourth he becomes besotted and falls to the earth and rolls like a hog in the mire.

"May Allah protect us, Sidi Lyautey is right."

In that connection it is depressing to note that the saddest state of affairs prevails in Belgium, where absinthe has become practically the of the voter is shown. However, als of Belgians make them the least
